

Dear Mrs Kelly,

It is often debated if children in schools need to wear school uniform or not. In my opinion, I think school children do not need to wear school uniform a quick fact is that the school trousers are as thin as shorts and then on casual trousers you can regulate the temperature a lot more than school trousers are.

I strongly believe that it is important to wear your school uniform but you can not express yourself. In fact, I have not experienced or saw anyone getting bullied for the clothes they wear so I think it is ok to wear what you like. It is clear that the casual clothes are a lot comfier and easier to move in, and it may cost less. I do respect that everyone wears school uniform but when you can still smart clothes for church. Whenever you are going on a trip you can wear a school jumper or polo. If you are the younger sibling you can get your clothes from your older sibling or if you are the older sibling you can maybe get your clothes from your parents.

In addition to comfier clothes, it is unfair that teachers can wear casual clothes and students can not. I think that the students should be able to wear casual clothes until high school because you will get used to wearing uniform after six. Then on the first day of school you can wear smart clothes or something. After a couple of weeks everyone will get use too it so why not try a few days or so? I personally love getting up early and choosing what I can wear on the weekends and I would like to do it at school as well.

Although it is true that it is easier to wash school clothes and it may be harder to wash casual clothes, you may have a smaller range of uniform and a wide variety of casual clothes, so why not wear casual clothes on Monday because you are straight after the weekend and you need to get used to school and work. Friday because you are getting ready for relaxing and having a rest from hard work and because it is only a half day.

My conclusion is that school uniform may cost more and on the other side you can get your clothes from your siblings or parents. That we are still a bit too young to wear school uniform everyday. Last but not least, you may have a smaller variety of school uniform and a wide range of casual clothes. Thank you for taking the time to read my piece of writing and hopefully you will conclude to wearing casual clothes on Monday and Friday.

Yours sincerely,

Filip Flisek
